COLOUR ME HAPPY

From the tiniest of hints, to a splash or an all-out hue frenzy, there's a way to satisfy your craving for colour.

ALL-WHITE IS THE only way to go when it comes to kitchens, right? Although white is timeless, you can add a little spice to your (kitchen) life, all the way from a hint of colour to a daring display. Here's how...

1. Just a touch

Tone it right down to achieve just the lightest sprinkling of colour. This one is perfect for renters and first-timers looking to dip their toe into the colour rainbow – accessories and small appliances can do the heavy lifting for you in minimalist kitchens. An Empire Red KitchenAid will be the perfect complement to an array of rich-toned ceramics. Throw in a playful tea towel and you've got yourself a (mini) colour riot. Choose pieces that you love, rather than what's in fashion, to ensure they last the test of time. A framed artwork can be the perfect starting point if you're not certain of the palette – pick out a couple of tones from the canvas to get your imagination working.

2. Statement piece

It's tough to forget about white completely – maybe you're just not ready to commit yet. We hear you! Here's where a bold statement appliance comes into its own.

Now is the time to indulge that colour fantasy: whether you're lusting over a retro fridge in baby blue or getting all hot and bothered over the Smeg Portofino 90cm Dual Fuel Upright Cooker in Orange, one big, bold piece can add that extra spark you've been searching for. Warning: the bright side can be addictive.

3. Turn it up

If you're ready to take it to the next level, now is the time to consider the cabinetry and splashback as the new stars. Choose one shade that you're certain you can live with – it might be an all-time favourite or an inspiration from nature – and go all in. Big, bold turquoise meets warm timber and sleek grey for a distinctively contemporary look, or tone it right down with a wash of soft blue on cupboard doors against an all-white backdrop. Pair just one colour with a minimal texture palette to ensure a visually calming space.

4. Colour pop

We've reached peak colour addict. Play around with combinations to find the right balance for you – ensure continuity with the rest of your home by carrying a similar palette throughout the living and sleeping areas. If you're really embracing colour, choose three bold tones for cabinetry and accents, and pair them with a thoughtful selection of materials. A speckled terrazzo benchtop is an up to the minute choice, while stainless steel keeps the look restrained. And, while the colourful accents will definitely be the stars of the show, ensure the eye has a restful spot to land – the organic texture of a timber-panelled ceiling or the freshness of white-veneered storage units will keep the space balanced. When it comes to the rest, the only limit is your imagination: throw the old colour rulebook out the window (hello, pink and red!) and embrace your own palette.

“For an outdoor space with entertaining credentials, start with the appliances.”

THE TRICK TO creating your own ‘outdoor room’ is to start with the big stuff, like barbecues, and work your way back from there. Your plan should split the different zones – cooking, eating and relaxing – ensuring they’re covered off with the right accessories.

So, to get you started, here are some of our favourite alfresco entertaining pieces that will transform your backyard into an outdoor kitchen oasis to rival your indoor comforts.

Barbecues

Forget the awkwardly shaped, smoky set-up of old, the barbecue has come of age. Not only do the new models handle snags and prawns with ease, you can also add in a wok, rotisserie or even a pizza oven to expand your outdoor repertoire. Prices can range from $60 to $6000, so you need to start thinking about what exactly you want from your barbecue. If you’re tight on space, a fuss-free portable option might be the choice for you. But if you’re a family that loves to entertain with ease, then a bells and whistles approach is the way forward – in fact, it’s easy to set up an entire outdoor kitchen if you factor in the right accessories.

TIP: If you live near the ocean, cast-iron hotplates can be prone to rusting. Opt for barbecues with a stainless-steel or enamel hotplate instead.

Seating area

After you’ve measured out the space for your barbecue, fit in a complementary seating zone. Bleacher-style bench seats are a top tip for small yards. They offer a range of seating options for guests and family, and you can soften the look with outdoor cushions. For balconies, go for smaller café-style tables and folding chairs, so you can sit and relax then stash them away when not in use.

If you’ve got enough space, then complement your outdoor zone with a dining table and an outdoor sofa. The table setting will keep your mealtimes focused and create space for outdoor feasts, while the sofa becomes an afternoon chill-out zone perfect for BYO gin and tonics.

Smaller spaces

Compact, well designed and cute – these options work for balconies and courtyard spaces, and you can easily pack them up to take along to your next park picnic.

GREAT OUTDOORS

No one does outdoor entertaining quite like Australians. And why not? Everyone knows food tastes better in the outdoors.

Image for illustrative purposes only.

Big spaces

At the other end of the scale, sturdy and brimming with fancy functions, bigger barbecues can offer as much as your oven – with a better view. If you’ve got the space, capitalise on your outdoor room with a multi-functional set-up: you’ll love the sense of space. Either opt for a larger standalone piece or for a more integrated approach that is set into a benchtop.

If your family love the outdoors, then a complete outdoor kitchen might be exactly what you need. Having all the usual kitchen luxuries within arm’s reach can really enhance your entertaining potential. Built-in barbecues look seamless and can be extended into a bench as a food-prep zone, with the added benefit of cupboards underneath to stash all your plates and cutlery. For next level outdoor kitchens, also add a bar fridge under the bench so you can store your food and drink close to hand.

CLARE PATIENCE

“Maintain your barbecue to keep it functioning well.”

KEEP IT CLEAN

Given it will be exposed to the elements, you want to make sure your barbecue is in top condition.

- Always ensure the cover is on when not in use.
- It’s always best to clean the barbecue while it’s warm after cooking. Let it cool a little, then gently scrape down the grill with a non-scratch scrubber.
- Don’t use oven cleaner – always use hot soapy water or specialised barbecue spray.
- Before you enjoy your food, place a stainless-steel bowl of water in the barbecue, turn the burner down low, close the hood and let it steam up for about half an hour. The steam created makes it easy to wipe under the hood, hotplates and side panels with a paper towel. Just don’t forget it’s in there!

Things to consider when selecting your new Dishwasher.

Measure your space

Don't make the (potentially very expensive!) mistake of guessing or trying to remember them. If you're one or two centimetres out it can be a disaster.

Load Capacity

Once you've measured the space for your new dishwasher, you need to consider the maximum capacity inside the dishwasher for each wash load. As a general rule of thumb, 1-2 people need 6-9 place settings, 3-4 people need 9-12 place settings and 5+ people need 12+ place settings.

Type and eco efficiencies

Built-in Dishwashers are (as the name suggests!) built into your kitchen to create a clean look without any gaps. Integrated dishwashers are hidden behind a panel matching your kitchen cabinetry to create a sleek, minimalist, streamlined kitchen look. DishDrawers are installed at waist height and slides out like a drawer; they can come as either a single or double drawer design. The ergonomic design is easier on backs because there's no bending down or awkward lifting. DON'T FORGET to check energy and WELS rating (shown as stars) when you're purchasing a new dishwasher. More stars equals more savings in the long run.

The unit

Gone are the days of buying both units (indoor and the outdoor) for each room's split system. With a Multi System, all you need are the indoor units, for the rooms you want to heat or cool, and a single outdoor unit to power them (and a qualified installer to install it, of course!). You can connect up to six individual indoor air conditioning systems to the one compact outdoor unit.

Plus, choose the right product to suit each individual room's space from a wide range of indoor units available including wall mounted, floor / ceiling consoles and cassette units.

The power

The options are almost endless with Multi Systems. The outdoor models range in capacity between 6.8kW to 12.5kW; providing a suitable solution for a small apartment, townhouse or a family home. The indoor units also come in a variety of capacities to suit the type and size of the room ranging from small to large bedrooms and living spaces.

The convenience

Don't spend time searching for remotes in each room, or learning the different functions for each model – you can simply use the central controller which is available with the 5 and 6 room multi systems.

The optional large backlit LCD central controller enables each unit to be monitored and controlled individually or simultaneously. You can also select remote control prohibition which is great when you have kids that like to play with individual remote controls.

The cost

While Multi System installation costs may be a little higher than a single split system, if you're looking to heat or cool multiple rooms, a Multi System offers other benefits including saving you precious space. You will no longer need to install multiple outdoor units around the outside of your home for each indoor unit. Depending on the indoor unit chosen there are other great features to highlight like Human sensor control available on the Designer range. This clever feature switches to energy saving mode when no movement is detected within a room after 20 minutes. It then reverts to normal operation when occupants enter the room.

Need it installed? Leave it to the professionals

When it comes to installing a Multi System, or any large home appliance for that matter, it is essential that you get a professional to complete the work.

Trade Supervisor, Lee Mancs, said these are just a few reasons to choose The Good Guys Home Services to install your new Multi System:
